HOW TO FIND H-INDEX IN WEB OF SCIENCE?

1. Access Web of Science and check that the selected database is Web of Science Core Collection. Choose Author Search. Enter last name and up to four initials, finish search.

2. Select your profile from Article Groups and click View records. You can combine multiple authors if you see your profile has not been grouped together right.
3. You’ll get a list of publications included to your profile and the click Create Citation Report.

Another way to create Citation Report, is to add your publications to Marked List and got the report that way. This way you are able to search for possible missing publications.

5. As a result you’ll get the report with total publications, h-index, citations etc.

You can refine your report e.g. by excluding publications from your list or select certain years.
